GOOD MEWS!

Merry Christmas, Smokey!

By WHITNEY ASQUE/Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — Weekly World News readers have done it — their overwhelming response has saved a brave momma cat named Smokey from a death sentence!

Smokey is the 8-pound cat that killed four dogs that were threatening her kittens.

After the brutal alley brawl, Smokey was captured by animal-control authorities and declared a threat to public safety.

In accordance with local regulations, Smokey was scheduled to receive a lethal injection.

But officials have changed their minds — and admit the tremendous response from NEWS readers following our November 21 story on Smokey's desperate situation forced their decision.

"Quite frankly it is very disturbing for us to go against regulations like this.

"Not putting this cat to sleep flies in the face of standard practice," an animal-control spokesman said.

"But because of the sheer volume of mail, we're left with little choice in the matter."

At press time, 20,000 readers had sent sarcic and letters demanding that Smokey be spared. The letters were forwarded to animal-control bureaus in New York.

A scant 14 letters said the cat should be killed — and eight of these responses came from the same person.

"We've never had an outpouring like this for any animal we've had in custody," said the spokesman, who refused to give his name. "It's clear readers of Weekly World News were determined to save this cat."

CAT LOVER
Janis Krieger.

Besides the huge volume of mail, several hundred animal lovers demonstrated in New York City, where the cat was being held. Many of the protesters carried placards with enlarged pictures of Smokey taken from the NEWS.

"This cat must be saved," said Janis Krieger, who organized the New York protest. "She did only what any mother would do — animal or human. She should be nurtured, not killed."

Officials have found a good home for Smokey.

"Thousands of people have said they want to adopt this cat," the spokesman said.

"It's just a tremendous outpouring of love for this little animal."

CABBIE GETS STIFFED ON $2,000 FARE — so he turns around & drives the guy 750 miles back home!

NEW YORK CITY — Cab driver Jamshed Butt thought he was onto a good thing when he picked up a passenger who wanted to go 750 miles from New York City to Troy, Mich.

But after the man racked up a $2,000 tab for the marathon trip, Butt was shocked to learn that his passenger had no money to pay it with!

Butt drove his deadbeat fare, Indian tourist Kaiser Kallal, 61, all the way back to New York so he could take him to court there. When he got home he called the cops and Kallal wound up in trouble with the law.

Butt says he wound up older and wiser.

"It was a bad experience," said Butt, a 31-year-old immigrant from Lahore, Pakistan. "Before that, I trust the people a lot. Now, I don't think so."

Butt said he was thrilled when well-dressed Kallal flagged him down at John F. Kennedy International Airport after arriving on a flight from Bombay. He says the man told Butt he wanted to go to Troy to pick up a checkbook from his former wife. He told Butt he'd pay him once he got the checkbook — and the cabbie agreed to the deal.

With an IOU from his passenger for the $2,000 fare, Butt drove night and day to take Kallal where he wanted to go. When they got to Kallal's ex-wife's house in Troy, Kallal picked up the checkbook, all right — but there was only $7.17 left in his account.

Butt said his only choice was to return to New York with his deadbeat passenger. He says the three-day, 1,500-mile roundtrip cost him a total of $630 and 32 hours of sleep.

"I'm just staying in bed now," said Butt. "Yesterday, I was trying to work. I went to my car and I came back. I said forget it."

Customs officer dressed as a woman so he could strip-search female tourists!

SAN CRISTOBAL, Venezuela — A sleazy customs officer faces 10 years in jail — for disguising himself as a woman in order to strip-search female travelers.

Police say Reynaldo Blanco — decked out in a skirt, wig and high heels — preyed on attractive tourists as they attempted to cross the border from Colombia.

Claiming to be looking for smuggled drugs, he would take each victim aside and conduct a body cavity search.

"This despicable pervert subjected at least 200 women to his sick perversion," said police spokesman Jaime Espinosa. "He was finally caught when one plucky victim, Swiss tourist Greta Schenker, became suspicious and reported him to police."

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

Blanco had no problem convincing supervisors that he was a woman when he was first hired in 1989 — and was able to maintain the masquerade until November 1991. The skirt-wearing cleric was finally caught when one plucky victim, Swiss tourist Greta Schenker, became suspicious and reported him to police.

"A customs officer approached me and told me to come with her," said Miss Schenker, a stunning 21-year-old. "She was rather homely, but I didn't think anything of it at the time."

Blanco ushered the aspiring actress into a small, barren room and ordered her to undress.

"I was a bit embarrassed at first — but I told myself that, after all, this was just another

That afternoon Miss Schenker contacted the Swiss embassy, which filed a formal complaint about the incident. Last week, after an investigation by Venezuelan authorities, Blanco was arrested.

FAMILY CELEBRATES CHRISTMAS AT DEAD SON'S GRAVE!

By ANN VICTORIA / Weekly World News

DETROIT, Mich. — Mike and Doris Shapman refuse to let the cancer death of their 7-year-old son tear their family apart this Christmas. They're celebrating the holidays at their beloved boy's grave!

Each day since December 2, when little Benjamin died of leukemia, the Shapmans gather at his graveside with their two remaining children, Ann and Tommy. The family tearfully sings carols, wraps presents and holds an emotional vigil trying bravely to keep the Yuletide spirit alive in the face of overwhelming tragedy.

They've even placed a small Christmas tree beside Benny's tombstone and continue to decorate it a little at a time.

"We're determined to go on as a family just as Benny would have wanted us to," says grieving mom Doris.

"In the months before he died, we promised Benny we would all spend the holidays together. We prayed he would be released from the hospital in time for Christmas, but God had other plans. We remained to keep our promise."

Mike and Doris got special permission from understanding cemetery officials who were touched by the family's heartrending story. They've Doris and I feel closer to him. And I think it means a lot to Ann and Tommy, too."

Doris says little Tommy, 4, is too young to really understand what's happened to his brother. But 8-year-old Ann misses Benjamin very much and often speaks of him.

1 IN 10 MARRIED COUPLES NEVER HAVE SEX — AND THEY'RE HAPPY ABOUT IT!

By KATHY ROSS
Weekly World News

Couples can be happily married and never have sex, say experts. In fact, a startling 10 percent of married couples have sworn off lovemaking ... and it suits them just fine.

"Sex is something that just doesn't interest them," says marriage counselor Dr. Abbie Snider. "There are people out there who have not an ounce of sex drive. Some even couple say, 'I just don't feel the need,' and they get married to people who feel the same way."

A low sex drive person wedded to someone who can attend encounter can have severe problems in their marriage. But when BOTH partners are sexually "neutral," the marriage tends to work out fine.

"One out of 10 couples in the U.S. are not having sex, according to our findings," says psychiatrist and sex researcher Dr. Anthony Pietropinto. "Contrary to popular belief, you can be happily married and not have sex."

Dr. Pietropinto cited a case of a couple who had been married 30 years. The husband was a slim, good-looking man in his late 50s. He hardly cared about sex, and was indulged when his wife initiated. He was more interested in his computer, books and work.

After the birth of their first child, the wife stopped making advances toward him and there sex life came to a dead stop. The husband was content to let it end — but he wondered in his 30s. Pietropinto that he feared his wife was cheating.

"I saw the wife about a few times," said the psychiatrist. "She said she was still in love with him. She had her family, a job she liked — and was GLAD sex was finally out of the picture.

"Obviously they had each met their match! I haven't heard or seen them again — which leads me to believe that they are in a happy sexless marriage."

Dr. Pietropinto concluded, "I think that sex can ultimately be put into a pleasure category that can be taken or left, like so many other things in life."

IT'S A WACKY WORLD — AND GETTING WACKIER

Mechanical monster tries to eat creator!

A MECHANICAL MONSTER turned on its master in England and tried to eat him.

By JENNIFER BROOKES / Weekly World News

The world is a crazy place — and it's getting crazier every day!

Bizarre deaths, weird weather, ghostly appearances and mass panics were on the rise in 1996, according to a connoisseur of oddball occurrences.

"The world is stranger now than it's ever been," said Todd Hartner, a Sydney, Australia, journalist who collects evidence of unusual events.

"In my estimation 1996 was the most unusual year of this century."

In one of the year's wackiest events, a Hindu sect leader was kept on ice in a town square for 66 days in the belief that he would rise from the dead.

"When authorities ordered that the body be removed from the square and buried, a riot broke out between police and nearly 1,000 of the dead man's followers," Hartner said. "It was an ugly scene."

In another incident, a mechanical sea monster turned on the man who built it — and nearly killed him.

The hydraulic creature was designed to frighten tourists near a small town in England. But a computer glitch caused the gigantic metal creation to lurch its jaws on the fellow who built it and hit him 20 feet in the air.

"It took nearly a half hour for a technician to safely get the man down," Hartner said.

In another strange case, a poet in Canada wanted to be cremated after he died — so his body could be used to blast a volume of his poetry.

But after a lengthy legal battle within the poet's family, his widow ignored his wishes and had him cremated.

In the year's weirdest weather happening, meteorists in Northern Ireland found their cars covered with a brown substance. After further investigation, meteorologists discovered it was sand from the Sahara Desert that had been blown more than 2,000 miles by strong, upper-atmosphere winds.

Oddball deaths seemed to be occurring with greater regularity.

"In Australia, a man was murdered when he was clubbed with a frozen kangaroo tail," Hartner said.

"In Switzerland, a man tried to slash his wife's throat with a hunk of stale cheese."

Perhaps most tragic was a New Delhi vegetarian who was killed by a piece of frozen meat.

The meat was apparently thawing on a windowsill when it fell off and hit the man on the head so hard it killed him.

The worst case of mass panic was reported in Tokyo, Japan, where more than 130,000 schoolchildren suffered fainting spells and severe nervous fits after a TV network carried a top-rated cartoon.

And in a curious poltergeist case, employees at a bar in England were puzzled by hundreds of mysterious needles that seemed to appear from out of nowhere. It was later learned that one of the bar's former owners was a seamstress who had died in the bar just days before she had planned to sell it in 1993.

NIXON DRESSED IN DRAG!

TRUE DICE: Richard

By LISA MERAKIS / Weekly World News

BOSTON — The author of a forthcoming book on the Nixon presidency says he has iron-clad evidence that Richard Nixon was a transvestite — and he even has photographs to prove it!

Malcolm Tenniper, 41, says his interviews with friends and associates of the late President revealed that the American leader dressed in a garter belt and hose, high heels, ladies' underwear and frilly frocks whenever he felt tense over matters of state. Nixon also partied in drag with FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, a known cross-dresser and homosexual, and was once photographed wearing a dress at Hoover's home.

AUTHOR Malcolm Tenniper.

"It's shocking, but true," said Tenniper, whose book Revealing Richard Nixon is slated for publication in Australia next summer. "Nixon was a heterosexual as far as we know, but he loved to cross-dress and hang out with other transvestites.

"Apparently his wife Pat put up with his 'hobby' and everybody kept quiet about it. But it was widely known among Nixon's inner circle of associates that the President regularly dressed in women's clothes."

Tenniper's stunning discovery about the late President was the result of an accident, the writer says. The widow of a close friend of Nixon had given permission for Tenniper to comb through her dead husband's files of correspondence and memoranda for interesting details of the Nixon presidency.

Amid a collection of letters from Nixon was a picture of the former world leader in a lady's dress. The photo was taken at a party, Tenniper said.

"The picture was folded into a serious letter about his health problems and plans for a trip abroad," the author told Weekly World News. "On the back of the photo there was a message in Nixon's handwriting: 'At least I get some R & R now and then.'

"After that find I confronted Nixon associates and some of them confirmed the late President's passion. They said they had seen him in the White House on many occasions relaxing in women's clothes."

The author said some Nixon intimates were told by the former President that cross-dressing helped him unwind at the end of the day. They said Nixon urged his male friends to try the practice as a way of achieving lower stress levels.

Thousands of faithful are flocking to the Holy Land!

By NICK MANN
Weekly World News

JERUSALEM — The appearance of a mysterious new star over Bethlehem strongly suggests that Jesus Christ has returned to Earth 2,000 years after he was crucified by the Romans — and proves that the end of the world as we know it is finally at hand!

That's the word from Bible scholars and clergymen who believe it is just a matter of days before Christ steps forward to protect true believers from the horrors and torment of Armageddon and the End Times.

The star, incredibly, has been ignored by ultra-liberal television networks and other "big media."

But millions of Christians have spread the word through a grassroots network of church bulletins, newsletters, local radio broadcasts and personal telephone calls — and are now flocking to the Holy Land to find and follow the Messiah.

No less a figure than the famed evangelist Dr. Billy Graham is said to be among those believers.

And while plans have yet to be finalized, Dr. Graham is expected to jet to Jerusalem to address the world via satellite when, as one source put it, "God gives him a sign."

"This is the beginning of the end of human history and I can only hope that you, personally, are prepared," declared Bible scholar Dr. Robert Martinette, whose classic 1984 book, World With an End, is widely recognized as one of the most important ever written.

"Christ's return to Earth is as important, if not more important, than his birth 2,000 years ago. And even though the threat of Armageddon might frighten non-believers, Christians can rejoice in the fact that Christ will soon take us to Paradise and eternal life with our Father in Heaven.

"We know that this is coming to pass," he continued, "because the star over Bethlehem is [illegible]. Men don't create stars — only God can do that.

"And make no mistake. This new star has never been seen before. It was created on high as a sign to all of us. The sign comes directly from God."

The large, exceptionally bright star first appeared as a dim speck over Bethlehem in the spring of 1992 and has grown spectacularly over the past three years.

[illegible] mined that it is 6.7 million light years from Earth. Technically, its name is NL-450, "but just about everyone is calling it the 'Star of Bethlehem' or 'The Jesus Star,'" Dr. Martinette said.

As the faithful flock to Jerusalem, Bethlehem and other sites in the Holy Land to await instructions from Christ, government officials are preparing for what one spokesman called "an onslaught of believers, not the means to care of themselves."

The relief effort could cost billions, continued the spokesman, as more and more people find out about the star and the number of pilgrims swells "into the millions."

"Authorities shouldn't fear for the pilgrims — authorities should fear for the loss of their souls and the beginning of Armageddon," said Dr. Martinette.

children — that is the promise we find in the Bible. Millions of people know and believe this, and will drop everything to find and follow Christ.

"With a wave of His hand, with a single word from His mouth, He can summon the faithful to the Holy Land.

"This mysterious star signals the beginning of the fulfillment of ultimate Bible prophecy," he added. "These NOTTINGDEAN, England — Horrified hobby William Cox, 76, backed the family car over his beloved wife Jean and crushed her to death — on their golden wedding anniversary!

Cops say the devoted oldsters were on their way to church for a special mass in honor of their 50 years of marriage when the grisly mishap occurred.

"Mr. Cox was trying to back the car out of the garage and Mrs. Cox was standing behind him, giving him hand signals and helping him maneuver his way out," said Police Sgt. Paul Hastings.

"But somehow, he lost control of the car, lurched back wards and ran her down. Then he apparently panicked and drove forward when he realized he'd hit something — running over the poor woman a second time."

Ambulance attendants say the silver haired, 72 year old victim — dressed in her Sunday best — was still under the wheels of the car when they arrived.

A fire rescue team lifted the car away, but the 50 pound lady was pronounced dead at the scene.

"There are just no words to describe how we feel," said Cox, who met his wife when they were both 16 years old. "We've been married for more than half a century and it's just so tragic to see it end like this," said devastated daughter-in-law Jane Cox.

"And it's especially sad to see it happen on one of the biggest days of their lives. They were leaving for church and afterward we were going to have a big party for them and everything.

"We were all so excited, so happy for them — but all our happiness died with Jean under the wheels of that car."

THE WATERPROOF TRIBE

. . . their skin stays dry as a bone — even in a pouring rain!

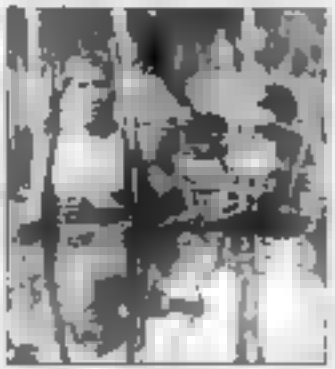
By KATHY ROSS / Weekly World News

CARAJARI, BRAZIL — The incredible "waterproof tribe" of Tarqueira Indians can be drenched with buckets and buckets of water — and yet their skin and hair stay perfectly dry!

Experts believe the 250 remote jungle dwellers have developed skin with a special texture so they can survive the near-daily rain forest. Water droplets run off them like water off a duck's back, according to scientists.

"These people can stand in a pouring rain and remain as dry as a bone," French physician Jacques Tellerist says. "Water slides right off them like they are covered with grease.

"We believe the Tarqueira have developed an immunity to wetness after hundreds of years in the rain forest. It's an example of evolution at work. After generations of amazing success, their skin has developed the waterproof tribe in just while traveling along the Juma River by dugout canoe. He had stopped by the Indians all night to observe the ancient rituals when an overthrown three-day rainstorm battered the primitive settlement.



Amabili Bertalili developed a special skin texture so they never get wet in the rain forest.

The Indians went right on with their normal activities in spite of the drenching rains, Dr. Tellerist noticed. Yet although they bathed, fished and farmed in the downpour, their hair and skin stayed absolutely dry.

Dr. Tellerist says he has taken skin samplings from the waterproof natives and hopes to discover what is in their skins that prevents them from moisture.

"Someday we may be slapping this substance on leaders a raincoat," he said. "We can do with umbrellas."

Veteran actor Barry Nelson played 007 — as an American agent. Now 78, Nelson is philosophical about missing out on the chance to play Bond in the movies.

"I don't spend much time regretting," he told a reporter.

New survey cuts RIGHT to the bone

Doctors really HATE most of their patients

By JUNE SAWYER / Weekly World News

Almost everybody hates going to the doctor — but you might be surprised to find out doctors aren't too crazy about seeing you either!

In fact, a recent medical school poll found that a whopping 73 percent of doctors actually hate their patients.

Another recent survey reveals the top 10 things doctors and patients hate the most. An alarming number of complaints deal with the relationship between doctors and patients.

"A Gallup poll showed that 80 percent of the people are losing faith in their doctors," said Linda Hunnac, who wrote the book Healing Wounded Doctor-Patient Relationships.

Here's the list of things patients don't like:

1. Patronizing doctors — Physicians who are so impressed with themselves that they make patients feel like dimwits.

2. Insensitivity — Docs who say things like "Well, what are you dying of today?" really irk patients.

3. Not listening — Doctors who are daydreaming about their stock portfolios while the patients are spelling out their symptoms.

4. Speed demons — Doctors who are in a big hurry to get into the golf course as soon as they finally take the time to see you. After patients wait three or four hours they expect more than 15 seconds with the doctor.

5. Hush? — Doctors who talk fast in some fancy medical lingo that patients don't have any chance of understanding.

6. Arrogance — This kind of stuck-up attitude can make sick patients even sicker.

7. Closed-mindedness — Patients are put off by doctors who are unwilling to go beyond traditional medical treatments.

8. Lack of compassion — When a patient feels that the doctor cares more about his stethoscope than about him.

9. Money, money, money — Patients hate docs who have a cash register sitting next to the treatment table.

10. The shock factor — Patients hate doctors who use the phone to tell them they have cancer. Even worse are doctors who leave gruesome messages on answering machines.

But doctors have their share of complaints, too. And here's their list:

1. Lack of trust — Most doctors are good people — and when patients treat them like creeps it hurts their feelings.

2. Patients with lists — Docs don't like complainers who have hours worth of "symptoms" they want to yak about.

3. Demanding patients — Overbearing folks who demand instant diagnoses and tests.

4. Time wasters — Some people love to sit and talk about their long, painful medical histories. These people really have a field day when they go to the doctor office.

5. Irresponsibility — Patients who don't take care of themselves make the doctors want to throw up.

6. Lawsuits — Docs hate patients who sue them for malpractice. Many doctors are forced to pay huge insurance premiums because patients sue them for the slightest mistake. Some doctors even refuse to treat patients who have sued other doctors.

7. Copycats — Docs really hate it when patients read about a miracle cure in the newspaper and automatically believe it will work for them.

8. Busy work — The hours of endless paperwork for insurance companies, government agencies and pencil-pushing regulators can put doctors in an early grave.

9. Pressure — Making life-and-death decisions all day can really get to a guy.

10. Informed consent rules — Doctors don't like having to run down the long, strong list of all the possible things that can

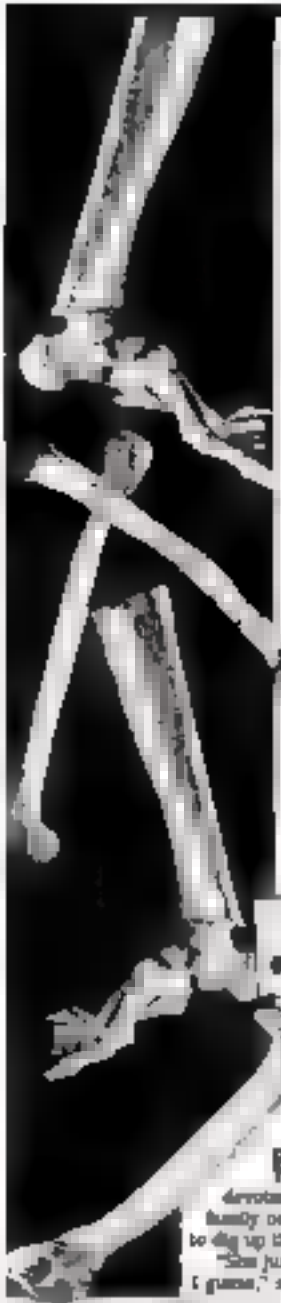
Family dog digs up bones of dead relatives

...and brings them home!



GRAVE-DIGGING dog Roxy with her owner Tammy Heinzerling.

By LISA MIRABEL / Weekly World News

BATON ROUGE, La. — In the most heartwarming tale of animal love ever, a family reports their pet Akita Roxy disappears every now and then — and comes back with the bones of beloved family members who have passed away!

She came trotting in with a shoe — & Grandma's foot was still in it!

The Heinzerstein family says their devoted dog visits a 150-year-old private family cemetery four miles away in order to dig up the remains and bring them home.

"She just wants them back with us again, I guess," says Tammy Heinzerstein, 32.

"She's brought back parts of my father, my husband's Uncle Thomas, and Grandma Heinzerstein. The first time it happened we were a little upset, but now we realize she does it out of love. She misses those people.

"If the bodies were buried in modern sealed coffins, we wouldn't have this problem.

"But it's a family tradition to have simple, old-fashioned funerals. We only use inexpensive pine boxes, which are easy for Roxy to chew through."

Fourteen-year-old Roxy has been with the Heinzerstein family since she was a tiny puppy.

At one time or another, each of the dead relatives had stayed in the Heinzerstein home with the dog — and the affectionate animal apparently developed a strong attachment to them.

Tammy recalled, "But when Grandma died in August, she really went off the deep end. After the funeral the poor dog left home and didn't come back for more than a week.

"We thought we'd lost her forever. Then one day she came trotting in with a shoe — and Grandma's foot was still in it!

"We knew it was Roxy's way of telling us she wanted to bring Grandma home, because it was wearing the pink-and-white patent leather shoes we buried her in."

In the last few weeks Roxy has searched for other dead human friends — and has brought back pieces of Thomas Heinzerstein, who died in 1984, and Tammy's father Harold, who died in 1982.

The animal apparently sniffs out the scent of the dead relative, digs down six feet to the coffin and then chews through the casket to get at the corpse.

"We've tried to keep her chained up, hoping she'd forget about it, but as soon as we let her loose she takes off and heads for the cemetery," Tammy says.

"She made about 10 trips to bring parts of my father here. Luckily, we just don't have the heart to stand in her way."

IT'S THE HOTTEST THING IN HOME SECURITY

World's BIGGEST mousetrap stops burglars in their tracks!

CAUGHT IN THE ACT: Hardened mousetrap snaps burglars like rodents.

By KEVIN CREID
Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — The newest innovation in home security is a mousetrap-like device that snaps shut on burglars' backs when they try to steal your TV or computer!

The trap, known as the Dermain Surpriser, comes in two basic models. One resembles an ordinary TV cabinet. The other looks like a computer work station.

Like a mousetrap, the Surpriser is rigged with a hidden spring-loaded metal bar.

When the thief picks up the "bait" — the TV or computer — the bar smacks down on his back, pinning him to the desk surface or cabinet shelf to flop around and struggle like a helpless rodent.

"You can leave your home with confidence," says inventor Murray Dermain, who has sold more than 50 Surprisers locally since November.

"You'll have the satisfaction of knowing that if someone tries to make off with your TV or computer they'll be caught and waiting right there for you when you get back. You can call the cops' non-emergency number at your leisure and say, 'No rush. He'll be here whenever you arrive.'"

It took Dermain a full year to design the Surpriser.

"My original idea was to rig a heavy trap that would cause a rifle to blow the intruder away during an illegal entry," he explains. "But I quickly realized that would be impractical. Believe it or not, several thieves who got shot turned around and sued the homeowners. Some of them collected big settlements.

"So I decided not to involve firearms. Instead I found a way to treat these burglars like the vermin they are."

Though no deaths have yet resulted from the devices, there have been severe back injuries and some liberal groups want the Surpriser banned.

INVENTOR: Murray Dermain.

A spokesman for the New York-based Committee for Suspects' Rights calls the Dermain Surpriser "cruel and inhumane."

But Dermain responds to the protests by asking, "How humane is it to break into a person's home and steal his belongings?"

He plans to go national in May of 1996 and people all over America will be able to order through an 800 number. The Surpriser is expected to sell for $169.

By then, other models will be available, including one called the Supreme Jewelry Box, which will be disguised as a jewelry box.

BUSINESSMEN PAYING $25 EVERY HOMELESS CHILD KILLED!

RIO DE JANEIRO — Callous Brazilian businessmen are paying death squads $25 in blood money for every homeless child they kill!

The estimated 8 million Brazilian kids roaming the streets of Rio are considered bad for business because they upset the customers by begging for food and money.

The heartless fat cats are paid the $25 bounty by so-called "respectable" citizens. A recent report said more than 1,000 of the children have been murdered since 1991 — and the number is growing by the day.

Some of the victims are as young as 7 years old.

10 mistakes women make that ruin their love lives!

When it comes to relationships with men, women sometimes do the dumbest things.

"There are so stupid things they do to mess up their lives but they can avoid them by following my advice," declares author and therapist Dr. Laura Schlessinger. Here are the mistakes and Dr. Schlessinger's tips to set things right:

1. Living solely through a man: Women who let a man control the relationship eventually feel cheated and angry.

"Be the best you can be in your own right," says Dr. Schlessinger.

2. Settling for a man: Desperate women settle for any man. Don't settle for anyone less than you deserve.

3. Having blind devotion: Some women stick with the wrong man no matter what. "Ask yourself: 'Would I want my daughter to date a person like this?'"

4. Continuing passion for love: Too many women have sex out of a feeling of emptiness or hunger for approval. Wait and choose a partner you've gotten to like as a person first.

5. Moving in with a man: "Studies show that couples who live together before marriage are two-third more likely to break up within 10 years."

6. Expecting too much from a man: Choose a responsible mate, not a man you think will solve your problems.

7. Having a baby for the wrong reasons: Women who have a child to fix a broken relationship often become trapped with a man they should dump.

8. Feeling helpless: Too often women whine, cry and blame men for their problems. Respect yourself and solve the problems on your own.

9. Staying in an abusive relationship: Get angry and get out. Don't be forgiving. A mother's first responsibility is to her children. Don't let anyone hurt them.

10. Forgiving any type of behavior: Women desperate to stay in a relationship will forgive a mate's adultery or drug use. "Tell him you won't condone the behavior," says Dr. Schlessinger, author of The Stupid Things Women Do to Mess Up Their Lives. "And if it doesn't stop, leave!"

If I don't get sex before New Year's Eve, I'll explode!

Dear Dotti: I'm a 27-year-old man in DESPERATE need of a woman. Unfortunately, I'm not only a virgin, I've never had a date — and I'm scared of girls. This has really been weighing on my mind lately and, Dotti, I just can't wait much longer. With all the holiday parties going on I've been thinking about women a lot and I've decided that I want sex and I want it now. If I don't get it by December 31, I don't know what will happen. Give me some advice — fast! — Gene

Blast in Bentley

in Bradley

Dear Gene: I hate to rain on your parade, nerd, but let's be realistic. Instead of sex, you might do something on something you might really be able to accomplish. Like getting to first or second base!

Does Santa know I beat up my sister?

Dear Dotti: I did a lot of bad things to my little sister this year and I'm worried that Santa Claus will punish me for it. For one thing, I beat her up a lot. I also pulled her hair, threw up her homework, told lies about her and even got a roach on her hamburger. My sister says Santa isn't going to bring me any toys for Christmas because I've been so mean. I'm it. Do you think Santa Claus knows I've been mean? — Billy in Marshville

Dear Billy: The Fat Man doesn't make a list and check it twice for nothing. And "the bottom line" you bet's it — but good!

How can I beat these terrible holiday blues?

Dear Dotti: Every year right around this time I really get depressed. I guess it's because my family is spread out all over the United States and I spend the entire season alone. I'm a single, 43-year-old female. And frankly, I'm getting too old to have much of a social life. Sometimes I get so lonely I could cry. Dotti, what can I do to beat the holiday blues? — Myrna in Ann Arbor

MYRNA in Ann Arbor

Dear Myrna: If you really want to avoid the blues this Christmas, get off your duff — and I do mean LAZY — and volunteer to help people less fortunate than you. You'll feel like a million bucks — and they will, too!

I'll make '76 my best year ever — by killing them!

Dear Dotti: I've been thinking a lot about taking control of my life in 1976, and I've finally decided how to do it. My problem is my mother, who has smothered me since I was a child. Now, at the age of 28, I'm still a single man who lives at home with his mother. She runs all every woman I try to date. And she interferes in my life at every turn. So, Dotti, I've made up my mind. I'm going to make 1976 my best year ever by killing Mom. — Barry in Los Angeles

Dear Barry: Your subconscious is telling you to see a shrink, and if you have any sense, funny boy, you'll listen!

I love my lady — but I dream about her brother!

GENE in Bentley

Dear Dotti: I've been dating a wonderful woman for five years and we really get along great in every respect. Recently, however, I've been having sexually provocative dreams — not about Jeanie, but about her brother! I've never even considered a relationship with a man while I'm awake, but these dreams are so exciting.

Is my subconscious trying to tell me something? — Jeff in Edina

Dear Jeff: Your subconscious is telling you to see a shrink, and if you have any sense, funny boy, you'll listen!

The flashlight I got for Xmas doesn't have a bulb!

Dear Dotti: I've been working at the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital as a volunteer for about a year. Last week I was asked to help out at the annual Christmas party for the patients. I was assigned to hand out gifts with co-workers whose names we drew out of a hat. I brought a wonderful little flower vase for Mildred but all she got for me was this giant flashlight that shakes like crazy when you turn it on. Even worse, it didn't even come with a bulb! I accepted it graciously and made a real big to do over how much I needed it. This is really eating at me, Dotti, and I'm wondering. Should I tell Mildred how I feel or leave well enough alone? — Shirley in Garwood

SHIRLEY in Garwood

Dear Shirley: Before you shoot off your mouth and make a fool of yourself read the instructions that come with that "flashlight." Unless I miss my guess you'll find out how useful that thing can be — with or without a bulb!

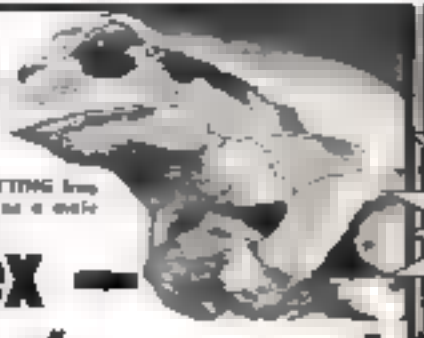
Incredible frogs change sex — whenever they want!



SWITCH-HITTING frog enjoys sex as a male and female

When a colony of African reed frogs faces a "manpower shortage" they solve it an astonishing way — the female frogs simply turn themselves into males!

By RICHARD SHARP

Incredibly the ugly creature can become both mother and father in the same lifetime.

"The frogs change sex only when there are too many females," said Dr Eduard Lissenmeier, a top German zoologist.

"It only happens when females outnumber males three to one."

The sex switch begins with the females developing rather stringer voices. Then they begin to crowd in with the croaking and chasing to try and mate the highest male in the chain.

The most reed frog attracts a female by calling from the highest place available — established by Lissenmeier.

At this stage the transsexual frogs have already begun to develop false sex organs. Dr Lissenmeier says he's received 20 female frogs in his laboratory with males.

In just a few months the sex change is complete and the new males replace natural mating behavior with female frogs even performing the females' role. They never revert back to female.

Bizarre law makes doctors strip when patients do!

By KEVIN CREED

CEUTA, Spain — A new law requires doctors to take off their clothes when they ask their patients to disrobe!

The law, which went into effect in November, is intended to ease the embarrassment many patients feel when they must undress in front of a fully clothed physician.

"It evens things up a little," said legislator Laura Espinosa, who spearheaded the new law. "Undressing in front of an authority figure like a doctor can make a person feel powerless and vulnerable. When the doctor himself has to strip, it takes away some of his psychological advantage and relaxes the patient.

"It's hard to be in awe of a man whose rolls of fat and hairy rear end are hanging out in plain sight."

But many doctors are opposed to the law and say they'll leave town and start their practice in another city rather than comply with it.

... has practiced in Ceuta for nearly 20 years.

"The doctor-patient relationship is sensitive. It depends on the doctor being in command. I can't make an accurate diagnosis with my patient looking at my private parts. It undermines my authority and ruins my concentration."

However, Miss Espinosa is not moved by Dr. Chavez's argument.

"If a physician needs to have a psychological advantage over the patient, he's

Why does a ghost visit me every New Year's Day?

Dear Serena: As I have told you in previous letters, I am haunted by a terrible ghost that visits me every New Year's Day. It has happened every January 1 since 1985. I don't have any idea why he always arrives on New Year's Day and each time he comes it gets scarier and scarier.

The last time he visited, this ghost said he was going to take me back with him to something he called the Other Side. I don't know exactly what he meant by that, but ever since then I've been dreading seeing him again. The closer I get to New Year's Day the more danger I feel. Please help me, I don't want this ghost to take me away from my family. — Frightened to Death

Dear Frightened: I'm glad you wrote to me before anything happened. That evil spirit would have captured your soul this year and it would have been beyond your power to do anything about it. I have cast a spell of protection for you that will remove this ghost from your life forever. If you had not written me before January 1, it would have been too late for me to help you.

By the way, the ghost always visited you on New Year's Day because that is the anniversary of his death back in 1971.

Dear Serena: I want to break up with my boyfriend but he's always said if I do, he'll do something drastic. I want to get rid of him before New Year's Eve because there's another cool guy who wants to take me to a party that night. What will happen if I break up with him now? — Trapped in Colombia

Dear Trapped: Don't pay any attention to his threats. In fact, he has recently been dating another girl on the side and will simply go to her when you break up with him.

Dear Serena: My boyfriend loves the TV show Friends. He taped it every week and quotes all the girls. Serena, I'm concerned he spends too much time looking at other girls. Please tell me — will he be faithful to me? — Sad in Kingman

Dear Sad: I'm sorry to say he's not faithful to you now. In fact, he is hiding his bisexuality from you and is having affairs with three different men.

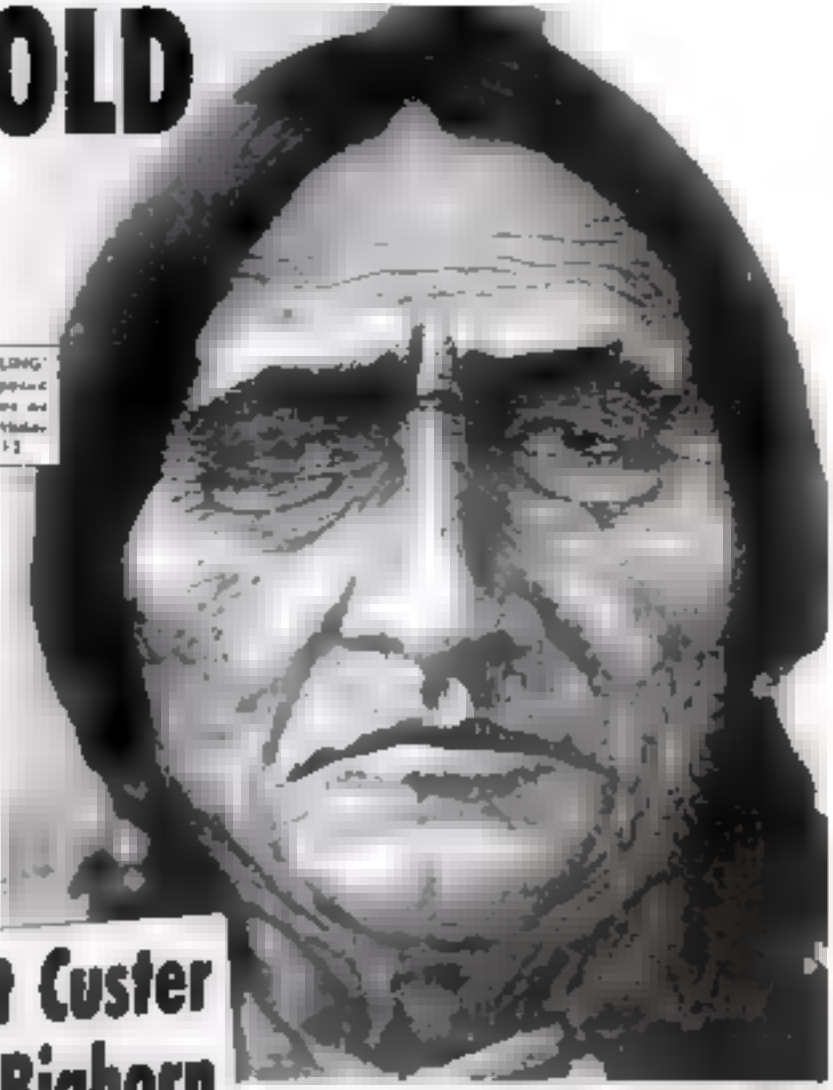
203-YEAR-OLD INDIAN IS ALIVE IN MONTANA!



MIND-BOGGLING: Yellow Fox posed for this picture on his 203rd birthday last January 11.

TANYA BROOER Weekly World News

Retired professor Margaret Collins has discovered a living relic: A 203-year-old Indian who was already old when he fought Custer at the Battle of Little Bighorn!

The Billings, Mont., anthropologist says Yellow Fox, a resident of a nursing home in Montana, was 84 when he reloaded rifles and passed ammunition at the famous 1876 battle. Dr. [redacted] says she found out about the two-century-old Sioux from a friend who has a relative in the same nursing home.

He fought Custer at Little Bighorn when he was 84!

"His name is Yellow Fox and he says he fought against the U.S. in the War of 1812 when he was a young warrior of 20," says Collins. "He says he was 11 when his people signed their first treaty with the U.S. government.

"The doctor at the nursing home believes the man is telling the truth that he was born in 1793. Judging by the state of his few remaining teeth, his bones and his internal organs

"He says Yellow Fox is in failing health and probably won't live much longer, so I visit him as often as I can to tape-record his recollections. He's very sharp and his stories of Little Bighorn and life on the plains are priceless glimpses of history."

According to Dr. Collins, Yellow Fox has provided fascinating information about Custer's Last Stand, in which the cavalry general and slaughtered by Sioux warriors, along with 264 of his men. The old Indian says Custer was brave in battle. But the general's men — who had wandered into an Indian camp with thousands of warriors — were a hysterical bunch of sissies, he says.

"We laughed at the paleface," Yellow Fox recalls in new tape-recorded interviews. "They were running around like ants on a burning stick. They were cowards who died without dignity.

"We despised the ones who attacked for their women and children. Only a few fought like real men and these we honored with a quick and merciful death."

Yellow Fox can also recall the streams of California gold rush prospectors traveling west in 1849 and the first Pony Express riders on their way to Sacramento, Calif., in 1860. He remembers seeing his first Iron Horse in 1870 — a steam-belching locomotive heading west to California.

When President Garfield was shot on July 2, 1881, Yellow Fox was already 88 years old. He clearly recalls the assassination — and his recollections of the San Francisco earthquake in 1906 and his first look at an airplane in 1926 are also still sharp.

"He can speak for hours about the Depression, about wild animals," Dr. Collins said. "And he remembers life with his tribe and his family with great affection.

INDIAN specialist Margaret Collins

"He stayed on a South Dakota reservation until just 14 years ago, and then his bad health forced him to enter the nursing home.

"It's very fortunate he was discovered before he died. He's a living history book and I want to preserve his memories for all time."

13 offbeat ways to make your housework easier

By NANELA THOMAS, Weekly World News

If you've ever thought, "There's got to be a better way," you'll appreciate the following household hints. They're taken from 581 Household Tips, prepared by Country Acreage Farmers Almanac.

● Add a plastic windshield scraper to your kitchen supplies. It's a great tool to pry dried-on foods from the floor or counter without damaging the surface.

● To pick up slivers of broken glass, press a piece of soft, fresh bread over the area. It picks those irritating bits of glass right up.

● Remove makeup with baby wipes instead of makeup remover pads, which can be costly. Besides, baby wipes are gentle to the skin.

● To protect your salt shaker from rusting, paint the inside of the metal top with clear nail polish. When dry, open the holes with a needle, pushing from the inside out.

● The next time you bake a chocolate cake, use cocoa instead of flour to dust the pans. You'll eliminate the white pasty flour leaves behind on the cake's bottom.

● Instead of throwing away leftover coffee or tea, freeze it into cubes for iced coffee or tea. They work great instead of diluting your drink.

● To make your everyday glassware glisten, add a spoon of vinegar to the rinse water.

● Avoid using paper bags and other products made of recycled paper in your microwave. Bits of metal in the paper could cause sparking.

● Button shirt and blouse sleeves to the front buttons to prevent tangling in the wash.

● Before putting on a new pair of sandal foot panty hose, spray the toes and heels with hairspray. You'll get many more wearings out of your hose and also stop runs.

● Get rid of [illegible] ants in the garden inexpensively by pouring ammonia into an anthill and the surrounding area.

● Tossing salad in a bowl is not the most effective way to do it. Instead put all the ingredients in a plastic bag and shake vigorously. Then serve in individual salad bowls.

● Slice bagels and rolls in half before freezing them. They'll defrost fast and can be put into the toaster frozen.

At age 8, Jin Li weighs an earthshaking 481 pounds!

CHIKAN, China — Scale-jangling Jin Li, the King Kong kid once renowned as the world's biggest baby, has a pudgy little brother who's following in his footsteps — straight to the refrigerator.

Chubby-cheeked cherub Pan Li is only 2 years old — and already weighs a whopping 111 pounds!

"The doctors told us Jin was the biggest baby ever, but Pan's even bigger for his age, he really is," said the boys' astonished mum Mei. "And he's eating just like Jin did when he was 2 — four pounds of fish, two whole chickens, 10 bowls of noodles and six bowls of rice a day.

They say if he keeps eating this way, he could weigh 450 pounds before he gets to first grade."

Proud Hubbery brother Jin was an infant from the day he was born in 1981, but he stopped growing at a world-record-breaking size. They were astounded to weigh him in the village to weigh him in the [illegible]

Simple new way to beat headaches — with checkers and a headband!

STOP THE PAIN of headaches by inserting checkers or backgammon pieces inside a regular sports headband

OSLO, Norway — Now you can get dramatic relief from excruciating headaches, instantly — by putting on a headband and stuffing checkers or backgammon pieces inside it!

Researchers at Oslo University Medical Lab who developed the startling new pain-killing technique say it's based on the ancient Chinese practice of acupressure.

"The objects in the headband press against key pressure points," says Dr. Olaf Hasgen, who headed up the year-long project.

"They stimulate the brain to speed soothing relief to the painful areas in the head."

Dr. Haugen studied more than 500 subjects who suffered from severe headaches. He asked them to rate their headaches from one to 10, with 10 being the worst.

When they perceived their pain as reaching level 10 or higher, they were given an elastic headband and asked how it helped.

Next, they inserted two plastic pieces about the size of checkers into the headbands, right at the points of maximum pain, and kept them there for approximately 30 minutes.

The headbands eased the pain so amazing 90 percent of the subjects with the checkers said relief came within 30 minutes.

Although Dr. Haugen admits that anyone who suffers from chronic or frequent headaches should see a doctor for a personal diagnosis, he points out that the headband is a simple, safe and fantastic remedy for the majority of headaches.

Here's how you can give it a try:

1. Put a pair of knitting needles and the head and the [illegible] ...

2. Close your eyes and concentrate on the pain. Locate it in your mind.

If it's like inside the head, draw an imaginary line out from it to the spot on the outside of the skull closest to it.

3. Take a checker or backgammon piece and insert it into the headband so that it presses lightly against the pain point.

Remember you don't need a lot of pressure. In fact, too much can make the pain worse.

And don't forget that frequent headaches can be a sign of serious problems so, if they continue, see your doctor for a checkup.

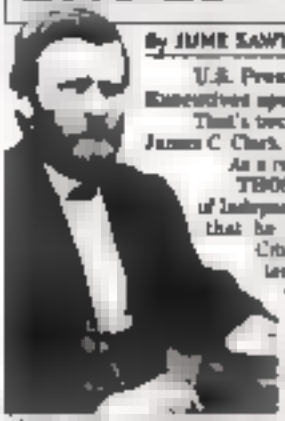
MANY U.S. PRESIDENTS ENDED UP BANKRUPT!



By JUNE SAWYER /

U.S. Presidents now retire to a life of luxury — but many past Chief Executives spent their last years deeply in debt and died in abject poverty.

That's because there was no Presidential pension until the century ended, James C. Clark, author of Pastel Glory: Presidents Out of Power

As a result, here's how some Commanders-in-Chief fared:

THOMAS JEFFERSON was revered as the author of the Declaration of Independence. But after his Presidency he was so inundated by creditors that he put his beloved home Monticello up for sale in a lottery. Citizens eagerly bought the $15 lottery tickets — but the patriotic winner refused to take the estate's home. However when Jefferson died in 1826, his family ended up having to sell Monticello anyway to pay off his massive debts.

JAMES MONROE was so poverty-stricken that he had to sell his Virginia home, then left the world in 1831 with his daughter and son-in-law living in his New York City guest bedroom.

Monroe spent his final years exploring the virtues of the Bonapartes, whose generosity didn't even leave him the price of a newspaper.

ANDREW JACKSON returned to his Tennessee estate, The Hermitage, in 1837 with a mere $14 in his pocket. Creditors hounded the 70-year-old Jackson for money, his English walking stick failed — but his no-do-well adopted son Andrew Jr. kept running up new bills so that he and his dad would pay off the old ones. Jackson died in 1845 bankrupt and broken.

ULYSSES S. GRANT blew a huge chunk of his savings on a two-year trip around the world with his wife after leaving office. There he invested his last $100,000 in a Wall Street broker who then quickly floundered. The government restored the Civil War general to his old Army rank at an annual salary of $13,000 but that barely made a dent in his enormous debt.

Grant finally began writing his memoirs to try to get money. But he died of throat cancer in 1885 soon after completing them. Ironically, the memoirs were a huge success and brought his widow Julia nearly a half million dollars.

CIVIL WAR HERO Ulysses S. Grant penned his memoirs to make ends meet. They sold for big bucks after his death.

FEMINIST SAYS SEX ATTACKS BY SPACE ALIENS MUST STOP

ACTIVIST Ajuda Klaus is rallying women to speak out about their male enemies from outer space. She's teaching gals how to avoid the fate of the busty final abductee at right.

How to prevent UFO abductions

Earth Women Against Alien Brutality say you can't elude a determined alien if he is really intent on getting you, but you can do certain things to make yourself less attractive — and hopefully send him elsewhere for a victim. They offer gals the following pointers on how to avoid UFO abductions and rape:

◆WEAR YELLOW: Aliens don't like yellow — especially mustard yellow —

OUT AT NIGHT: If you must go somewhere, use mouse as a protection. Switch your car radio or tuner to easy-listening, hamburger-type tunes, which aliens hate. Harp and zither music also drives them away.

He hasn't aged a day since 1963 — when Lee Harvey Oswald's bullet put him in a coma!

JFK IS ALIVE — IN TOP SECRET MEDICAL LAB!

By MICK MAHN

WASHINGTON — President John F. Kennedy has been kept in a state of suspended animation in a sophisticated life-support chamber since his alleged death in 1963 and doctors now believe they have the technology to revive him once and for all!

That's the word from author and Kennedy expert Donovan Castner, who claims to have obtained a photograph of the "sleeping" 75-year-old President from CIA sources who were instrumental in covering up the truth about the attempt on Kennedy's life in Dallas on November 22, 1963.

According to those sources, JFK suffered "significant brain

And in what will surely go down in history as one of the most elaborate and far-reaching Hoaxes ever, the CIA, acting on direct orders from Vice President Lyndon Baines Johnson, orchestrated the burial of a wax dummy in Arlington National Cemetery while the genuine President was rushed to a secret medical facility in the Arizona desert ... where he remains in a state of suspended animation today!

To top it off, several key surgeons now believe the President can be taken off life support and revived with a powerful combination of drugs and surgery that could restore consciousness and

The rumors that JFK survived assassin Lee Harvey Oswald's bullets have been flying for years now and all sources have proved those rumors to be true.

"Camelot didn't die — it's just taking a nap. And when Kennedy wakes up, if he wakes up, the world will finally know the truth about Dallas."

And in the strangest twist of all, he is perfectly preserved. He hasn't aged a day since he was placed in the chamber in 1963.

Oswald said: "My sources say Mr. Clinton is aware of the situation and is considering his public relations options as we speak."

For security reasons the sources declined to identify the doctors who believe they can revive JFK, although it is my understanding they will make a final decision regarding the surgery within the next two weeks.

If Oswald's report is accurate, a key question is whether the Kennedy family — including JFK's wife, the late Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, knew that Kennedy survived Dallas.

ANIMAL JUSTICE:

Lawbreaking pigs were dressed up in human clothing and flogged

GUILTY as charged! Wilbur-lookin' porker is ready to be whipped.

. . . & other bizarre [illegible] punishments!

By KATHY ROSS / Weekly World News

Pigs used to be dressed in human clothing and flogged for violating laws . . . a bull was once put on trial for laying the wrong kind of egg . . . and a filthy-mouthed crow wound up under arrest in Tokyo for [illegible] in public.

It's no bull — these are just a few of the bizarre penalties people have imposed on animals.

"Throughout history, animals have been tried and even punished," said Brad Steiger, author of The Weird, the Wild and the Wicked, that details such incidents.

Here, from Steiger and Tara Mann, co-author of A Perfect Name for Your Pet, are some examples of misbehaving animals that are just now in all the human news:

● During the Middle Ages in France, pigs were punished for such things as disorderly conduct or attacking humans. They would be dressed in human clothing, tied to a wheel and publicly flogged.

● A hen at least once sent a man to death in 864 A.D. in Germany. Officials of the Holy Roman Empire sentenced the whole hen to death by suffocation.

● In 1499, a bear was tried for terrorizing German villages. The animal's lawyer won a slight delay in the start of the trial by claiming the animal was not being judged by a jury of his peers. But the bear was found guilty by a human jury — and put to death.

● A court in Basel, Switzerland, put a hen on trial in 1474 when the chicken laid a brightly colored egg. The locals believed this was a demonic sign — and the chicken was found guilty and burned at the stake.

● In Libya in 1976, a dog was found guilty of biting a man. The pooch was jailed for a month — and given nothing but bread and water to eat.

● A foul-mouthed crow was arrested in Tokyo in 1972 for using obscene language in public. The crow was read its rights by police and released.

Ice cubes freeze faster with HOT water!

. . . and other wacky kitchen facts

By JENNIFER BROOKES
Weekly World News

Hot water freezes faster than cold water!

That's just one of the fascinating facts about cooking that author Harold McGee discovered when he decided to test kitchen folklore for his book The Curious Cook.

"The cold water I heated froze solid in 138 minutes," he said.

"The hot water, 133 minutes."

The reason, some of the hot water evaporated during the early part of the freezing, so there was less water to freeze.

There are some other less detrimental kitchen beliefs he put to the test.

● You really can cool your soup by blowing on it. "I boiled some water and poured it into a spoon 10 different times." McGee revealed.

"I blew on 10 and left the other 10 alone."

The result: The spoons of water he blew on dropped to 170 degrees — the hottest temperature he could stand — in an average of 31 seconds.

The other spoons took 45 seconds to cool. So blowing really does work!

● Cutting lettuce leaves for a salad does NOT make the leaves turn brown faster than tearing them. "I got a few variables of lettuce, cut some into pieces, tore others, then stored them in a plastic bag for a few days," McGee said.

"Both the cut and the torn lettuce browned at the same rate."

● Covering a pot of water does make it boil faster.

McGee tested the belief by heating two one-gallon pots of water — one with a top, the other without.

"The pot without the lid took 21 minutes to reach boiling," he said.

"The pot with the lid took only 13 minutes."

New study: Cats land on their feet ONLY when they're angry

BERLIN, Germany — A study of domestic cats reveals that the creatures can land on their feet after falling from great distances — but only if they are ticked off about something.

"They have to be angry and full of adrenaline," explained Dr. Gustav Werner, an animal behaviorist who has been studying felines for 30 years.

"A relaxed cat who rolls off a windowsill while snuzing himself or sleeping almost certainly will crash headfirst into the pavement.

"He has no chance of landing feet first because he's not on edge.

A cat has to be angry or frightened to have the reflexes to right himself in mid-air."

Dr. Werner says if all 34 relaxed cats he studied died as a three-story fall, while only 2 of 30 angry ones did.

Pet owners can protect their cats by not letting them sleep in high places.

Forget those expensive gyms . . . YOU CAN GET LEAN & MEAN BY RAKING LEAVES & VACUUMING!

By ELAINE ROBERTS / Weekly World News

You don't need to do sit-ups and deep knee-bends! You can get in tip-top shape doing everyday activities instead of struggling through boring, exhausting exercise routines, says an expert.

"Fitness really means being healthy, looking good and feeling good — you don't have to struggle with long tedious workouts to produce that level of fitness," declared Dr. Bryant Stamford, co-author of the book, Fitness Without Exercise.

WALKING is a natural way to exercise and can burn away as many as 200 calories a day.

All it takes is a few periods of physical activity each day to burn off body fat and keep muscles toned, Dr. Stamford said.

"Exercise in bits and pieces counts as much as exercise in large sweat-producing chunks."

Here are some of the activities Dr. Stamford suggests:

● Take short walks during the day.

● Turn simple household chores into calorie-burning mini-workouts. Vacuuming floors, dusting and cleaning windows are terrific for firming muscles.

● Rake leaves or garden and spruce up your yard. The bending and stretching movements will work off calories and increase your flexibility.

● For short-distance trips, such as visiting a neighbor or parking up front from the corner store, don't drive — walk.

● Skip those automatic car washes — cleaning your auto by hand is great exercise.

● If you live or work in a tall building, give up the elevator — climbing a few flights of stairs is a great calorie burner and good for a healthy heart.

● Instead of parking as close as you can to your job or the local mall, park farther away. The extra walking can burn away as many as 200 calories a day.

● Play some Ping-Pong, shoot a few baskets or toss horseshoes — all are great exercise, and more fun than aerobics!

VACUUMING make sweep the fat and firms up muscles.

GARDENING works all those calorie-shedding muscles and increases flexibility.

NEW: Miracle surgery cures painful heel spurs — in days!

Painful heel spurs can now be easily eliminated in a doctor's office thanks to a new technique — and many patients resume walking immediately, say experts.

"The amazing new procedure for heel spurs is exciting because it works so well and so quickly," declared Dr. Morris Fenton, a podiatric surgeon. "Patients are cured in days instead of months."

More than 10 million Americans suffer from heel spurs. They develop when a certain ligament pulls away from the bone and tugs the nerves around the heel, causing pain and trouble walking.

Most patients can be helped by corrective devices inside the shoes, injections or physical therapy. But more than a million sufferers don't respond to these methods.

Doctors used to perform surgery to repair the damage in hard-to-cure cases.

But with the new procedure, called endoscopic plantar fasciotomy, the surgeon makes just two tiny incisions. A microscopic TV camera is slipped into one slit. Small surgical tools are manipulated into the other.

While looking at a TV monitor, the surgeon makes a tiny cut in the ligament, which helps it to lengthen and stop tugging the nerves.

"Pain stops immediately in most patients and doesn't return," said Dr. Bala Sennikian.

"We close each wound with one stitch — and the patient walks away pain-free. Patients say it's a miracle!"

The procedure is done under local anesthetic and "the patient feels nothing," he added.

A Christmas gift that is almost certain to be returned to sender.

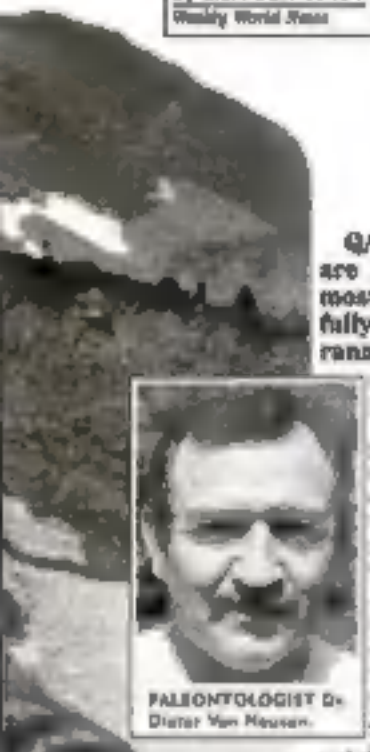
50-FOOT-TALL DINOSAUR FOUND FROZEN

By LILA SCHWARDT
Weekly World News



PALEONTOLOGIST Dr. Dieter Von Hausen.

QAANAAQ, Greenland — Scientists are rushing to the site of one of the most fascinating finds in history: The fully preserved body of an ancient Tyrannosaurus rex, a meat-eating dinosaur that roamed the world 100 million years ago!

The 50-foot-long animal looks like it has been dead only a few days, according to scientists who have seen the rare find. It had been completely encased in ice beneath a glacier until rising temperatures caused by greenhouse gases melted the ice and exposed its gigantic corpse.

"This is a spectacular find," said Dr. Dieter Von Hausen, a German paleontologist heading the scientific team at the site. "Fortunately, the temperatures near the site are still cold enough to preserve the animal just as a refrigerator would, giving us plenty of time to photograph and study the dinosaur.

"We are learning all sorts of things about Tyrannosaurus rex that we didn't know. For example, they were bright red in color and their shoulders and haunches were covered with a light layer of soft, downy hair. They ate meat, but they also ate soil, apparently getting vitamins and minerals from it."

Dr. Von Hausen said the yellow-eyed creature was discovered by fur trappers ranging on the ice along the shores of Baffin Bay. The trappers said they saw an enormous mound near the water's edge about 150 miles north of Qaanaaq and when they investigated, discovered the Tyrannosaurus. Their reports of the gigantic reptilian beast brought dozens of scientists from major universities around the world.

The experts say the great beast, nicknamed Gus, lived at a time when Europe, Greenland and North America were one huge continent. It died in a swampy valley, probably because of an infected wound. Biopsies, measurements and observations conducted by the scientists reveal the animal:

- Was a 4-year-old male who probably received its wound in a fight with another Tyrannosaurus.
- Crawled on its belly at least some of the time.
- Had three stomachs, like a cow, and no emotional center in its brain. "This was a merciless killing machine," Dr. Von Hausen said. "It saw, it killed and it ate. It had no feelings."
- Shed its skin like a snake as it grew.
- Had bright purple scales arranged in stripes which spanned the length of its tail.
- Had an extremely low sperm count, a fact that might explain the eventual extinction of its kind and the end of the dinosaur era.

"The body is so well preserved that we are planning to save it in its entirety for display," Dr. Von Hausen said. "After we have completed our studies we plan to move it to Bremerhaven, Germany, where we have the industrial capability to encase it in clear plastic.

"It should then be made available to museums around the world as the most exciting traveling exhibit ever presented."
